Josh joined the AES team in April 2018, having completed his engineering degree work experience with the company over the previous summer. During his time with AES Josh has completed numerous projects relating to District Plan, Building Code compliance, and education projects, as well as assisting on larger projects requiring extensive computational modelling. These include the Langland's Hotel in Invercargill, the Parliament Future Accommodation Strategy projects in Wellington, the New Dunedin Hospital, and the University of Otago Christchurch Campus Redevelopment.

Before starting study towards his Mechanical Engineering degree Josh worked in the manufacturing sector for a number of years, and undertook sound and production at large events. This previous experience has given Josh a good understanding of many of the real-world issues which he now plays a role in addressing as an acoustic engineer.

Josh is based out of our Wellington office in the heart of the CBD and lives up on the sunny Kāpiti Coast.
